Prairie style AW20 dressing from Nellie Quats

British childrenswear brand Nellie Quats presents its charming new collection for autumn/winter 2020. With a strong prairie girl influence, the range is irresistibly nostalgic, with ruffled necklines, billowing sleeves and sweet bows peppered throughout.

The brand's predilection for busy Liberty floral prints features across sleeveless dresses and short rompers that are intended to be layered in the winter and worn singularly in the summer. Linens in plain dusky pinks, rusty check prints and timeless plaids are used for wholesome button-down dresses with collars, pinafore frocks and elasticated trousers. Nellie Quats' Hospcotch dresses returns in a green check linen.

Staying true to the brand's desire to create styles that grow with each child, shapes are oversized and offer comfort. The emphasis on natural fabrics makes for quality and long-lasting pieces that can be handed down through generations.

About Nellie Quats

British award winning childrenswear brand Nellie Quats was founded by Elinor Bussell. She wanted to create enduring girl's clothing made from natural fabrics with a nostalgic twist. Every piece is designed in London and made in Portugal, with sizes ranging between 6 months to 10 years. Loose fits and adjustable details mean that every garment can grow with the child. Nellie Quats has collaborated on a capsule collection with Courtney Adamo of Babyccino Kids and a range of dolls with Merrilee Liddiard.
